2016; 374 (21): 2021-31. On the other hand, in individuals with a zero CAC, statin therapy can be deducted or delayed, considering the low incidence of cardiovascular events observed in this population. 55 Blaha MJ, Cainzos-achiric M, Greenland P, MCEVOY JW, Blankstein, Blankstein R, Budoff MJ, et al. In conclusion, even if the stratification of the clinical risk followed by the selective use of preventive pharmacological interventions is still the main primary prevention strategy, these new guidelines allow the individualization of the treatment by stratification of complementary risk, new therapies and facilitation of the involvement of patients in a shared decision-making process processes. This group, composed mainly of people with family hypercholesterolemia, has received particular attention due to the high rate of cardiovascular events, corresponding to a higher risk of 3-4 times compared to other people with the same LDL-C levels. Its use is recommended by the most recent guidelines when the pharmacological treatment is not well defined. Guidelines for the clinical practice of cholesterol 2018.
